Does Israel need solar panels?

Cowshed?

Cover it in solar panels. Israel will soon require all new non-residential buildings to have rooftop solar panels to help it meet renewable energy targets and the electricity demands of a fast-growing population. Although drenched in sunshine, Israel is too small to rely on traditional, land-intensive photovoltaic power plants.

Does Israel need a solar farm?

Ron Eifer, who heads the Energy Ministry's sustainable energy division, said Israel stands apart as a developed country in its dependency on sun as a renewable source, while lacking land for solar farms. It has fallen behind schedule on its goal to get 30% of electricity from renewables by 2030. "We have to take some dramatic steps," Eifer said.

Should a non-residential building be topped with solar panels?

When passing the state budget last month, the government ordered regulation to be in place within 180 days to require new non-residential buildings to be topped with solar panels. For residential buildings, the roof must be fully equipped for easy installation of panels later on.

Where are Israel's solar fields located?

Most of Israel's commercial solar fields have been built in the southern Negev desert, or remote areas to the north, far from the biggest cities. "Beyond the problem of electricity getting lost in long-distance transit to the centre of the country, it is important to maintain open spaces.

What is the minimum production capacity for a rooftop PV system?

The minimum production capacity has been set at 5 kW. The Israeli National Planning and Building Council has approved regulations requiring new buildings to install rooftop PV systems, according to a statement from the Ministry of Energy and Infrastructure.
